Tips & guide

DRESS CODE

The dress code in Nairobi is multi cultural and relatively relaxed. In rural areas For ladies however, avoid transparent or overly revealing clothing as Conservative hemlines in ladies fashions are appreciated.

GREETINGS

Most social interactions begin with a greeting. It is considered rude and disrespectful not to greet someone with a shake of the hand.

Telephone conversations will often start with a polite greeting and an inquiry into one's health.

PHOTOGRAPHY

Photography of the State House government institutions & military installations is prohibited in some cases. It is polite to always ask before taking pictures of local people.

SAFETY

Personal safety begins with you, and like any other big city in the world, it is encouraged you avoid walking alone in dark alleys especially in the night. Keep to well lit areas and avoid crowded places.

VISA

A visa is required prior to entry into Kenya and is readily obtained at the Airport upon arrival. You may also obtain one from the Kenyan embassies and high commissions offices abroad before departure. A single entry visa as always is valid for three months from date of issue.

HEALTH

It's advisable to travel with a small first Aid kit that includes Band-Aids, thermometer, sun block, oral re-hydration sachets, anti-diarrhea medication, antiseptics, water purification tablets and more.

Some of the hospitals include: The Nairobi Hospital, The Aga Khan Hospital, Mater Hospital, M.P Shah Hospital, Gertrude's Hospital, Karen Hospital and Kenyatta National Hospital.

WILDLIFE

Nairobi boasts of being the only city in the world with a national Park. The park has a variety of wildlife including the Big Cats, Giraffe, Buffalos, Zebras and others apart from the elephants.

FAMOUS PEOPLE OF KENYA

The first African woman Nobel peace prize winner – The late Prof. Wangari Mathai who had a commitment to the environment was Kenyan. She was also the first African woman in East and Central Africa to earn a doctorate degree
